

bleeding

Bleeding in pregnancy is always a worry - we understand! However, we see bleeding commonly in pregnancy and most of the time everything is fine. There are various reasons for bleeding in pregnancy, most of which are not related to your specific case, and yet we want to make sure that anytime you have bleeding you follow the guide below and keep us involved.

bleeding

I Am BLEEDING 1-20 Weeks:

Heavy or not?
(more than a period or light spotting?)

Light spotting (3 quarter size coins or less)
- Probably normal
- Especially post-examination or after intercourse: relax! (Bleeding is often caused by superficial bleeding from the cervix due to increased vascularity)

Monitor and see if it continues or gets heavy

Heavy (Like a period or more, soaking tampons or pads over a couple of hours)

(You will need to undergo evaluation requiring Ultrasound and/or lab work). If very heavy, you may need to go to hospital for immediate evaluation.

Call

I Am BLEEDING 20+ Weeks:

- Probably normal
- Especially post examination or after intercourse: relax! (Bleeding is often caused by superficial bleeding from the cervix due to increased vascularity).

Call

